

6 Dried fillets of pollock and dried fish bladders at the Guangzhao wholesalers market where street vendors come to purchase supplies.

7 Dried clams, abalone, scallops, mussels, and other mollusks. Most are dried and salted. They are rehydrated and used in soups and dishes. Dried seaweed is in the background.

8 Dried croaker that is sleeved, papered, and hung.
This fish is imported and then dried in China.

9 Dried sole that is head on butterflied, dried and then quick roasted over a flame. A hugely popular food found in Southern China and Hong Kong.

10 Dried cod fish

11 Items are sold in 500 gram amounts. Dried fish is very expensive for the every day worker who can earn from $1 to $3 per day. Note that 500 gram of these items is more than a day's wage.

12 Dried clams, mussels, and mullusks. Note that the abalone and scallops are in the back due to their expense. This a retail stall, denoted by its prices. Wholesale stalls do not have prices and usually sell only to retailers who will buy a large quantity or an entire box or bag.

13 Dried rubber fish that are imported from India and are butterflied, dried, and roasted in China. Many species consumed in China are from the Indian Ocean.